You Are Not Behind

Hi, Daughter ■

I know how easy it is to feel like you're late.
Late to healing.
Late to becoming.
Late to the life you thought you would have by now.

You look around and it seems like everyone else is moving forward—growing, building, blooming...
And you're still here, in a quiet place that feels slow and unseen.

But can I gently remind you of something?

God is not rushing you.
He is not measuring your life against anyone else's timeline.
He is not disappointed in your pace.
And He has not forgotten where you are.

There is a kind of growth that doesn't make noise.
A kind that happens beneath the surface—deep, steady, unseen.

Roots don't bloom.
But without them, nothing else can.

And maybe... just maybe...
This season you're in is not delay.

It's depth.

It's God strengthening you in ways no one else can see yet.
It's Him preparing you, holding you, shaping you—gently.

You are not behind.
You are becoming.

Right on time.
In His time.

A Quiet Reminder for Today

I am not late. I am being lovingly prepared.

Scripture

“He has made everything beautiful in its time.” — Ecclesiastes 3:11

Prayer

Lord,
When I feel like I'm falling behind, quiet the noise around me.
Help me to trust Your timing, even when I don't understand it.
Teach me to rest in where I am, knowing You are still working in me.
Remind me that I am not forgotten—I am being formed.
Amen.
